“The CDL Schools will be an exciting addition to our company and to our future, and a high growth service line for TransForce,” said David Broome, President and CEO of TransForce. “This acquisition will incredibly enhance and transform our solutions for drivers and carriers. The CDL Schools is also the founder and leader of Troops Into Transportation, an initiative that is in partnership with the U.S. Government to create truck driving jobs for troops in search of employment. Veterans can use their Post-9/11 GI Bill for training with Troops Into Transportation, and employment in the National Transportation Industry.

“We are honored to offer vocation education and employment opportunities to those who have served our country,” said Albert Hanley III, President and CEO of The CDL Schools. “It is rewarding to find a solution that concurrently provides answers for the ever-present truck driver shortage with the employment need for service members and veterans.”
